In these Oriental folk tales, it is not uncommon for genies to decide the fate of the living, nor for animals to begin to philosophize like their masters... And life has so many twists and turns that it is not surprising to see a poor man become best friends with a ruler. Geha, the main character in many of these adventures, is the perfect embodiment of this perplexing world. Both brave and cowardly, cunning and naive, sneaky and honest, he relies on his wits to survive, and always seems to get away with it. And that is because he never forgets to remain human...

Inspired by stories of Nasr Eddin Hodja, One Thousand and One Nights and Kalila wa Dimna, these tales offer young readers, in a fluid and accessible language, the heritage of a wisdom that remains very up-to-date.

- A pleasant intro to an Oriental folk character
- A smooth writing style with zingy humor and a subtle moral
- Stylized illustrations with arabesques

“Delectable tales you read to have fun while learning, or to learn while having fun...”
— Takam Tikou Magazine

Marwan EL-AHDAB | Author

Art history and the Russian language, finance and journalism, Marwan has visited many worlds before devoting himself to children's literature. Like his eclectic personality, his stories are fit for all ages and range from documentary series to fiction.

Maya MAJDALANI | Illustrator

Growing up in a family of artists, it seems natural that Maya grew up to be a professor at the Lebanese Academy of Fine Arts (ALBA). In 2004, Maya won the 1st UNESCO International Comic Strip Award.
