FICTION • First Readers

Edmond lives alone, peaceful, in a little town. He is a night guard at a museum. All day, he takes rest under his duvet, in his big cozy house. He snores and sleeps soundly, with no one there to bother him... That is, until a tiny man decides to set up camp inside Edmond's nose! Will the two men settle their territorial dispute, and learn to coexist?

- A lesson in tolerance and coexistence
- How to set and respect boundaries
- Humorous and light illustrations

Fabien TILLON | Author

Screenwriter and children's book author Fabien Tillon published Les Mèches courtes at Vertige Graphic, which won the Prix Tournesol at the 2011 Angoulême festival, then Les Heures Noires at La Boîte à bulles. He also wrote a number of essays on comic books such as Asterix and Mangas.

Gaël REMISE | Illustrator

In 1998, Gaël Remise graduated from the Émile Cohl school in Lyon. He then became a graphic designer in a communication agency in Paris and Haute-Savoie. For the past fifteen years, he has been teaching the graphic arts in Annecy.

In the Press

"This is the kind of completely wacky novel that inevitably amuses the youngest. We follow the adventures of the two protagonists wondering what solution they will find to live together. A quirky, sharp novel!"

— La Mare aux mots Blog

"The story is funny, the text is well written and the illustrations are pleasant." — Takam Tikou Magazine
